The Historic Council

The Historic Council carries the same capacity as the modern Security Council would, though with the advent of being from a historical period, and of originating within the League of Nations, where it was known simply as the Council. The HC carries the responsibility of defusing volatile international situations, and is tasked with eliminating threats to peace through international cooperation, and with combined intervention in military conflict. Members of the HC have the capacity to invoke economics sanction and to wage war, if need be, to resolve a conflict of interest or to enforce a mandate.

The HC will generally cover issues that relate to direct threats to peace and stability, and acts towards maintaining international peace and security. The HC wields virtually the same powers of the modern Security Council, with the only restraints being historical changes with the progression of time.

The Paris Peace Conference (1919)

The Paris Peace Conference (1919) will deal with the talks preceding the Versailles treaty. Members will assume the roles of post-WWI countries, with tensions still high from one of the most vicious wars the world has ever seen. The pressure will be on for countries to secure a future for themselves in a new, post-colonial time, whilst also treading carefully lest their action re-ignite the sparks of war. Throughout modern time, many historians have regarded the conditions within the Versailles treaty to be a direct cause to Hitler's rise to power, and the outbreak of the 2nd World War. Now, delegates will have the opportunity to embark upon a diplomatic course to relive the establishment of the Versailles treaty, and to re-construct the conditions and consequences of the peace talks. The outcome of these talks will mean the difference between a safe future, or another global war.
